

Interested in Publishing Your Own Cookbook?

Elizabeth F. Stabler

Description: This session will discuss how to start putting together a cookbook for your school, library or community center. After deciding on which cookbook press to use, what are the steps involved? Community cookbooks not only serve as fundraisers but also are a means to celebrate and memorialize a group's members and its particular customs. Community cookbooks are now being studied by scholars for insights into Jewish and women's lives.

Elizabeth F. Stabler (Liza) retired after having served as the full-time solo librarian at Temple Emanu-El, New York for 17 years. Previously she was the librarian at the 92nd Street Y and at the Trevor Day School. Liza graduated with an AB cum laude in anthropology from Bryn Mawr College and received her MS with honors from Columbia University's School of Library Service. It has been Liza's great privilege to have been associated with AJL and AJL-NYMA since 1994, working with many dedicated and talented librarians. In 2004, Liza co-chaired the AJL Annual Convention held in Brooklyn.